

WHAT YOU WILL LEARN

This coaching trajectory will add impact and authenticity to your presenting by means of theatre skills that will be optimised for this specific presentation.

The first step is to make every gesture, word and glance reach to connect with the jury. With personalised exercises you will achieve this over the duration of the coaching trajectory. The second step is to keep your audience attention level up by changing the way you present as you go along. Besides these two main steps you will learn to use story tools to get most out of the presentation you have to give and adjust it to the level of the jury..

All in all you can chose to learn to:

1. increase clarity and attention levels connecting to your audience with everything you do
2. increase attention levels and convincingsness by matching your way of presenting to your content
3. keep the attention up with effective transitions
4. increase the explanation clarity with theatrical gestures
5. design a storyline that makes us want to know the end
6. Deliver this talk with enthusiasm and confidence

TO TAKE INTO ACCOUNT

We found that individual coaching is most effective after taking either the Theatre Skills for Scientific Talks or The Art of Presenting Science courses. The effect of doing a course in a group has advantages that are not available in a one to one setting. If time does not allow that you can leave this remark as not made.

PRACTICALITIES

Veni Vidi Vici Coaching consists of six meetings of two hours to half a day. Time in between meetings is typically one to two weeks, although the interval towards the presentation will be shorter.

Homework adds up to six hours in total. You will be provided with a booklet detailing the course content.

WHO FOR?

Veni Vidi Vici Coaching is designed for every scientist aiming to win a grant proposal. This offer is open to both experienced and inexperienced presenters as the skills we teach are adjusted to your needs.
